

South Fork of Boise River Trip – Jan 8th, 2011

Written by Tim Bondy

Thursday, 13 January 2011 08:09 - Last Updated Thursday, 13 January 2011 08:53

Click for larger picture

On Saturday January 8th, 2011 I headed up to the South Fork of the Boise River below Anderson Dam. My main objectives were to determine if my new Plott Hound dog is a "water dog" and also get some exercise. One of my objective in taking this short trip WASN'T to get hopelessly stuck but...mission accomplished for getting stuck.

Snow, Weather and Roads

I checked the weather forecast just before leaving the house and saw there was a 30% chance of snow. When driving my non-4-wheel drive Nissan Titan, snow is a concern so I knew I'd have to watch the sky for signs of snow. The skies remained blue bird clear the entire time I was in the river canyon. Temperatures above the canyon were in the 16-21F range but once I got down below the Dam, temperatures were in the mid to upper 20F's.

South Fork of Boise River Trip – Jan 8th, 2011

Written by Tim Bondy

Thursday, 13 January 2011 08:09 - Last Updated Thursday, 13 January 2011 08:53

South Fork of Boise River Trip – Jan 8th, 2011

Written by Tim Bondy

Thursday, 13 January 2011 08:09 - Last Updated Thursday, 13 January 2011 08:53

Tim Bondy